

While summer may be over and temperatures are dropping, those working in education are just getting warmed up for a new school year.

Why not make yourself an even hotter commodity with the most innovative and useful professional development opportunities in the nation?

2012 NATIONAL TITLE I CONFERENCE

The National Title I Association's annual conference is the premiere professional development and networking event for those working within the Title I community across the country and it's right around the corner. More than 3,500 attendees are expected at this year's conference, so don't be left out in the cold!

For more information on the 2012 National Title I Conference and to register, visit titlei.org

Follow us on Twitter @NatITitleIConf and keep an eye on our blog for the latest updates!