

Communication/Contacts

- A great starting point is to begin with a survey. This can be done electronically.
- It may be beneficial to offer a reward for returned responses. This may be a small gift card for all returned responses, or a little larger gift for one-three people in a raffle.
- Consistency is important. Keep doing it, keep sending out reminders. This may be through a phone call, email, letter sent through the mail, or all the above.
- One of many resources available is Donnie Wetzel Jr. in the Tribal Relations and Resiliency Unit at OPI. His email is dwetzel2@mt.gov and phone number is 406-444-4527.
- Regular POSITIVE parent updates should be done periodically through phone calls, letters sent home in the mail, and email.
- The Parent Teacher Home Visit Project has a great training that can help schools develop strategies for meaningful and impactful home visits. Sometimes, events should be held at the school or another neutral site to get parents more comfortable before having schools' staff in their house.

Student/Family Engagement

- Family dinners are a good way to engage Native families. Here are some general tips that can help make them successful. Don't be discouraged if initial attendance is small. Keep offering events and attendance will likely increase.
- Include food when holding awards or celebration events.
- Include door prizes or small gifts for attendees.
- Convene a meeting with the Native students and have them design an approach or initiative to get their parents more involved.
- Reach out to neighboring schools with a large population of Native American students and/or schools on the reservation, to request contact information and to assist in building relationships with elders/drum groups/singers.

Curricular and Instructional Supports

- Have Indian education specialists in every school. (Some schools may already have them in place.)
- Contact Montana Office of Public Instruction Indian Education for All Staff to assist the school with any additional ideas or suggestions for contacts in your area.

Initiatives, Positive Environments/Health and Wellness

- Parent nights at schools: not conferences, but games, tours, and displays of student work.
- Oral Story interviews (parents and students).
- Student work regularly featured throughout the school's hallway walls, in classrooms, or newsletters and/or featured on the school website.
- Native representation in schools with Making Montana Proud Poster series and tribal flags/seals. Great Falls Public School has created their own version, titled Strengthening Our Community.
- Create a positive Native youth leadership group.
- Consider starting a Native American youth drum group. Educators may need help making initial contacts with area tribal drummers and singers that might be willing to assist.
